Here is an example of what people do EVERY day:

- 251 million Americans use the internet, (the U.S. population in July 2008 was a little over 304 million)
- 200 million people send or read email
- 200 million people complete a task like searching for information such as where is a local event venue.

Denton, TX customers have come to expect YOU to have a website

Yes, it has come to that. Denton residents along with the rest of the world population love looking at websites. Sometimes you are judged by your potential customer on whether you have a website or not. Having a website is as important as having a telephone, fax, voice mail, and an answering machine. A website provides you with the benefits of all of these methods of staying in touch and getting your message out to the Denton community 24 hours a day, or, you can keep doing what your doing and getting what your getting.

Denton residents are online looking for you RIGHT NOW!

Where are you! Your customers and potential customers are using the internet at home, school, work, at the pool, park, movies...everywhere. If you do not have a website, you are missing valuable income and a valuable way of communicating with your market.

Other Denton businesses are online

Other Denton businesses and organizations are online and aggressively promoting their websites more than ever. They know that right now you do not have a website and are using that fact against you. They are putting their website address in print, television, radio, in the Denton newspaper, on products like pens, business cards, letterhead, and handouts. What are you waiting for? They want to know. Where are you?

Your website tells your customers they are important

A website communicates positive values to your community and market. It tells them you care enough to provide them with a website with current information on it. If you feel like you are losing business to your competitors, you probably are. A website is not the entire answer, but it will certainly help.
